A young family decided to completely renovate a villa just a few kilometers from the sea of the south coast of Rome, in the city of Anzio.

The primary goal is to maintain the original character of the main structure while upgrading the House to be more contemporary and aesthetically coherent, spacious and functional.

The Idea

A clear separation between the living area and the sleeping area. The living area is completely open and the windows are enlarged to establish a more direct contact with the garden. To achieve this point, few demolitions were needed and suddenly the spatial potentialities were released.
